

Your Service Coordinator is your “go to person” for questions about services, connecting with other individuals or agencies that support your family, finding out about community services, or requesting to meet as a team. Most often, the service coordinator will also be the Early Intervention Specialist who works with you and your child at home or consults with the preschool or child care center your child attends. If your child is receiving speech therapy as his/her primary or only service, then the therapist may be your service coordinator.

The Service Coordinator is also responsible for calling together the Individual Family Support Plan (IFSP) team to review your child’s progress, and discuss goals and needed services at least annually if your child is 3-5 years old, or every six months if your child is under three.
