Permission to use Materials on the SOESD Web Site

The SOESD Web site provides resources concerning educational and related topics, facilitates sharing and cooperation among educational providers, and promotes learning and development of educational professionals and students. Yet, this electronic distribution of resources over the Internet does not limit the distribution of any included copyrighted content to its intended audience, nor prevent its duplication by the public.

Hence, the inclusion of copyrighted material posted on any SOESD Web, FTP, or other server that is available to the public is not covered under the fair use provision of PL 94-442, and also violates the Fair Use Guidelines for Educational Multimedia established in 1997.

Please cite the source the materials that you are including, and proof of permission to include the materials on our web site and submit this form the Computer Information Services Department so that your material can be approved for inclusion on the SOESD Web site.
